News Comes From Peking That the Foreign Envoys Are Again in Danger of Being Overwhelmed by the Bloodthirsty Celestials.

THE CHINESE DYNASTY DISPLAYS ALARM

Hostilities Will Continue Until Ministers in Peking Are Delivered Safely to the Allies—Li Hung Chang Given Authority to Negotiate With Powers.

Shanghai, Aug. 13.—[Special Cablegram]—At noon Saturday the allies were reported to be within twenty miles of Peking.

London, Aug. 13.—[Special Cablegram]—A dispatch from Che Foo says a general advance of the allies from Tien Tsin began on the eighth. It is believed that Peking would be reached on August 15. I would be no surprise if the allies were today nearing the gates of Peking. With the routes cleared by an advance column seven days would not be too short for a foreign army to reach the capital. Few details were allowed to pass the censor at Tien Tsin.

Tien Tsin, August 13.—[Special Cablegram]—Two couriers who left Peking on August 1, arrived today. They report that the Dowager Empress gave the legations food enough for a few days, but Li Ping Heng arrived from the south with troops and planted two batteries on the city wall near the legations.

He attacked the legations fiercely with shell and rifle fire for two days. The head of the missionary board was killed, according to the courier, while attempting to obtain provisions.

Americans Lost Ten Killed

London, August 13.—[Special Cablegram]—Details of the battle of Yang Tsun on August 6, say that the Chinese numbered 20,000. The Americans lost ten killed and fifty-five wounded, a part of the losses in wounded being due to a mistake by the English and Russians, who confounded the Fourteenth U. S. infantry, in the darkness, with the Chinese, and shelled them. Ten Americans were wounded through this error.

The battle lasted four hours. The Chinese lines extended east three miles from the railroad bridge. The British losses were fifty wounded, and the Russians ten wounded, including a colonel.

China Insolent to France.

Paris, Aug. 10.—The foreign office here has received through the Chinese minister, Yu Keng, a note from the Tsung li Yamen which is most insolent in its tone. It not only complains of the tardiness of the foreign ministers in Peking in replying to the offer of a safe escort out of the capital, but says the Tsung li Yamen will not accept the blame for any disaster which may follow the delays caused by the refusal of the ministers and then crowns the whole by an ugly sounding demand that the governments order their representatives out of Peking.

7,000 Massacred at Pao Ting.

Paris, Aug. 13.—The Patrie publishes the following:

"The procureur general of the congregation of the Lazarist missions, Mgr. Bettendorff, informs us that he has just been advised by M. Deleasse that according to a dispatch from the French consul general at Shanghai, received yesterday, 7,000 Christians have been massacred at Pao Ting, east of Peking. No other details are at hand."

Apprehension for the Envoys.

London, Aug. 13.—It is feared that a fresh onslaught on the sorely tried defenders of the Peking legations is impending. Defeated but still infuriated Chinese troops, driven from Piesang and Yang Tsun, must now be close to the Chinese capital, and whether the officials, alarmed by the European nations' threats of retaliation, can restrain the fanatical Boxers is a question which is causing lively apprehension, as it is doubted if the legations have sufficient ammunition and men to withstand a furious onslaught.

ALLIED ARMY GOES ON TO PEKING

The Washington Government Sends This Ultimatum Through Wu.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13.—The United States refuses to enter into any negotiations with Li Hung Chang, looking to a cessation of hostilities.

This refusal was contained in an official communication addressed to the Chinese imperial government and handed to Minister Wu today by Assistant Secretary of State Adee. The Chinese authorities in Peking are informed in the dispatch that no diplomatic steps will be taken until the demands previously made are fully complied with.

Demands Made Upon China

These demands are reiterated in even stronger terms, emphasis being laid on three points—namely:

1. The Chinese government must give convincing proof that the foreign ministers, attaches, and their families are safe.

2. The ministers must be put in full and free communication with their respective governments.

3. The imperial authorities in Peking must co-operate with the allied forces in securing unobstructed advance to the capital and the consequent protection of the foreigners.

The edit follows: "In the present conflict between Chinese and foreigners there has been some misunderstanding on the part of foreign nations, and also a want of proper management on the part of some of the local authorities. A clash of arms is followed by calamitous results and causes a rupture of friendly relations, which will ultimately do no good to the world. We hereby appoint Li Hung Chang as our envoy plenipotentiary, with instructions to propose at once by telegraph to the governments of the several powers concerned for immediate cessation of hostile demonstrations pending negotiations, which he is hereby authorized to conduct for our part for the settlement of whatever questions may have to be dealt with. The questions are to be severally considered in a satisfactory manner, and the result of the negotiations reported to us for our sanction. Respect this."

Cheering News From Conger.

In addition to the play for time veiled under the guise of an appeal for peace, a message from Minister Conger to General Chaffee was received, in which the minister says he will hold on until the relief troops arrive. This is decidedly encouraging to the Washington officials.

Earl Li Needs Watching.

The imperial government is apparently eager to bring about a peaceful solution of the difficulty and it is believed will be willing to pay almost any indemnity in order to keep the allies out of Peking. While Earl Li is conceded to be a diplomatist of the first rank and will in all probability be acceptable to the powers as the representative of China in the negotiations which are almost sure to follow, he is looked upon with suspicion by all the civilized powers.

An attaché of the state department in discussing the Earl said:

Greatest Liar in China

"He is undoubtedly the greatest liar in China. He is without heart, soul, or conscience, and will stoop to anything. It cannot be denied that Li Hung Chang is one of the greatest diplomats living, but he is also a most cruel Chinese, and has not hesitated to order the beheading of his own countrymen with a view to his own promotion. He cannot be trusted, and if he should negotiate for peace he will have to be watched closely."

Final Solution Will Be Trying

An impression prevails in administration circles which is almost a conviction that the solution of the Chinese muddle will be peaceful. It is the opinion here that China will ultimately comply with the conditions laid down by the president, as the imperial government must understand by this time that the only alternative is war. If these demands are not agreed to promptly an ultimatum will be sent which will close the doors to a peaceful settlement.

Reparation and Indemnity

The solution of the present critical situation in China, so far as relates to the deliverance of the ministers, is child's play as compared with the question of reparation and indemnity. After the present crisis has passed there will be played a game of diplomacy which will test the acuteness of the ablest diplomats of the world.

It cannot be denied that the tendency is toward the dismemberment of the empire, and the diplomatic contest will be one, and will have for its purpose the seizure of territory and peace among the powers. Of course this government will demand reparation for the damages sustained and the insults heaped upon the American minister and citizens. This will not be in the form of territorial acquisition, but a monetary indemnity.

GRAND DUKE'S TRAIN BADLY WRECKED

It Was Not Anarchists But Just an Ordinary Every Day Rear End Collision

Rome, Aug. 13.—[Special Cablegram]—The train on which the Grand Duke Peter of Russia and wife were returning from the funeral of King Humbert was wrecked today on a bridge near Salario, eight miles from Rome. Neither the Duke nor Duchess were injured, though fourteen other passengers were killed and forty injured.

The accident was caused by a rear end collision, the Duke's train stopping for repairs when an extra train crashed into it, telescoping the rear carriages.

HON. JERRY SIMPSON IN A SHIRT WAIST

Kansas Statesman Astonishes His Rural Friends and Makes a Few Suggestions to Women.

Wichita, Kan., Aug. 13.—An inexhaustible source of popular wonderment is Jerry Simpson. Time and political vicissitudes, the fears of opponents and his constituents' fickleness have failed to knock him from the pedestal to which, sleek and irresponsible, he leaped from the wave of Populism.

Now he has run the gamut from the extreme of rural attire to the ultra fashionable shirt waist. When he took to hose his followers looked askance. The effect of this latest innovation is more easy to imagine than to describe. The Medicine Lodge statesman spoke here, appearing in one of those soft fluffy, cool creations, which until recently were to be found only in the wardrobe of women. The garment had just been imported from the East.

"It's a fine thing for political speakers," said Mr. Simpson, "and just what they have needed. I do not wear it for

The first reports were that the train was wrecked by anarchists.

Tablet Honors Men of 1776.

One of the most interesting of Fourth of July celebrations was held at old Hartford Town (now Bush), in Maryland. The event of the day was the unveiling of a tablet in honor of the Hartford committee which in 1776 signed a formal declaration in support of the people against British oppression. In the town still stands the ancient hostility at which men of revolutionary prominence rested at various times. Washington passed through Hartford on his triumphal march to his first inauguration.

FRIED AN EGG ON WASHINGTON PAVEMENT

Practical Demonstration That the Capital Was Yesterday the Hottest Place in the Zone.

Washington, August 13.—Dr. A. J. Schacht, proprietor of a drug store at North Capital and H streets, this city, fried an egg on the asphalt pavement in front of his pharmacy yesterday shortly before noon.

The egg was gone to the turning point in seven and a half minutes after it was broken on the concrete by Dr. Schacht. It was then turned over as a cook flaps a pancake and was thoroughly cooked within ten minutes.

A little negro who was among the witnesses of the trick asked for the egg after it had gone the rounds of the curious bystanders and ate it with relish. A hundred or more employees of the government printing office, which is close by, watched the pharmacist oversee the egg frying act.

Dr. Schacht had made the assertion that judging from the heat registered by the thermometers standing in the sun it was hot enough to cook an egg on the pavement. Several friends who

MEAT PRODUCTS IN DEMAND

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13.—We will have dollar wheat before the end of the year," is the confident prediction of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson. The secretary has been making a careful study of domestic and foreign demand for wheat this year, and in view of the crop estimates which his experts have made, he looks for rising prices. When asked for his opinion in regard to the crop outlook and the probable prices of agricultural products during the present year the secretary said:

"The outlook for good prices was never better. We have a shortage in the American wheat crop this year which will probably amount to 100,000, style, but for comfort. I expect to wear it during my campaign." Then thinking, perhaps, of some of the jibes the disclosure of his lack of footgear several years ago, he added:

"Not the same one, because I have several. I shall urge my friends to wear them."

The shirt waist politician caused open mouthed amazement and considerable talk. His populist friends do not know whether their idol is trying to "shake" his common style of dress or whether he seeks more notoriety, but the change certainly helped him, as he ran things nearly to his own notion in yesterday's convention.

When he was getting ready to leave the hall, Mr. Simpson's nerve was not equal to the ordeal. He slipped into an anteroom, and a few minutes later appeared on his street in his coat. He put it on, he said, so he wouldn't have a crowd of boys following him.

000 bushels in all. This alone would valuable.

Best Fed People in the World

"Not only will our people be the best fed people in the world, as they have been in years past, but will be better fed than they ever have been. They have plenty of money to buy all the wheat they want for bread, and will have flour left over for cake if they want it."

"Moreover, the farmers themselves are getting good prices for all their products and will not be forced to stint themselves in their food supplies and in their buying as formerly. The shortage and the increased domestic demand will make foreign countries who buy wheat pay more, and the price must advance."

"Then would you advise farmers who have wheat on hand not to sell?" was asked.

"That, of course, is a matter which each man must decide for himself."

Low Price for Corn

Continuing Secretary Wilson said he thought there would be little or no rise in the price of corn, but on the contrary lower prices may be expected for this cereal. He said:

"The corn crop this year is unusually large. Perhaps there never has been a better prospect for corn at this time of the year in the country. The large supply will mean lower prices. When money is plenty and the prosperity is general the demand is always for the higher grade of foodstuffs. Our people will eat more wheat bread and less corn bread than usual this year."

"It is true that the prices for both wheat and corn may temporarily be affected by the falling off of the market in the east, but this trouble can be only temporary as the demand for flour is there and is increasing steadily."

Farmers Must Feed Corn.

"It probably will be advisable for our farmers to feed much of their corn this year to sheep, horses, cattle and hogs," continued secretary Wilson, "as the price of meat is high and the outlook for a continuous demand for our meat product both at home and abroad is excellent. Germany can exclude our meat on whatever pretext she pleases, but if she is going to feed meat to her soldiers in China she must buy it in Chicago. Moreover our meat is the best in the world."

PRINTERS MEET IN MILWAUKEE

Annual Session of the International Typographical Union—A Rod In Pickle For Bryan.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 13.—The forty-sixth session of the International Typographical union was called, to order at 10:30 o'clock this morning at Masonic hall in this city. Few of the total number of delegates were absent when President Donnelly rapped for order. The appointment of committees will occupy most of the time of the first session and the convention will not get down to business before tomorrow.

Among the most important matters to come before the session are propositions to do away with the election of officers by referendum vote and to abolish the referendum vote altogether. President's Donnelly's recommendation that convention be dispensed with will be met by a counter amendment to the constitution that provides for the continuance of the annual sessions, the time for holding them being changed from mid summer to October or November.

The law committee will also have to deal with a resolution to place "The First Battle" and "The Second Battle," by William Jennings Bryan, on the unfair list because they do not bear the union label.

Shah's Ministers on Skates.

Capital skating is generally to be had in Teheran, Persia, at Christmas time, but the Persians have never taken keenly to the amusement. When the late shah was alive he was so delighted with the performance of English residents on the ice that he got some skates for his ministers, who were far too fearful of losing their heads to disobey his command to put them on. Their antics on the ice amused Nasr-ed-Din to such an extent that he nearly had an apoplectic fit.—Boston Journal.

A MISTAKE IN SIGNALS

French Liner Brennus Sinks the Destroyer Framée in a Maneuver

ERROR IN READING ORDERS

Paris, Aug. 13.—During maneuvers of the French fleet off Cape St. Vincent Saturday night a collision occurred between the first-class battleship Brennus flying the flag of Vice Admiral Fournier, commander of the fleet, and the torpedo boat destroyer Framée.

It is feared that at least fifty officers and sailors lost their lives in the disaster, which is unparalleled in the recent history of the French navy.

The crew of the Framée consisted of four officers and fifty-eight men. Only a few are known to have been saved.

The full details of the disaster have not been received. It is known, however, that the loss of the torpedo boat destroyer was due to a misunderstanding of the signals set on the flagship.

Mistake the Signal.

Admiral Fournier, who is one of the ablest commanders in the French navy, had issued orders for the execution of a complicated evolution in which the destroyer was to turn to the left. Instead, the Framée turned to the right, passing almost directly in the course of the battleship Brennus.

The mistake was discovered too late. The battleship crashed into the frailer craft before the course of either warship could be changed.

The destroyer was literally crushed into a shapeless mass and sank almost immediately.

Only Few Are Rescued

A few of the men were picked up by the boats hurriedly lowered from the Brennus, but the destroyer sank so suddenly that the boats were unable to pick up all of the survivors.

Giant of the Navy

The Brennus is Admiral Fournier's flagship and is one of the giants of the French navy. It is a first class steel armor plated vessel of 10,938 tons displacement, its length being 374 feet and ten inches and beam 67 feet. It has a natural indicated horsepower is 7,000. It can, steaming normally, accomplish fourteen knots an hour. The horsepower under forced draft of 18,600, and with it the battleship can steam 18.2 knots per hour. The extreme coal capacity is 800 tons, so that, at a pinch, it can accomplish 4,500 miles at a uniform speed of ten knots. The crew numbers 606 officers and men.

BY WIRE TO THE KLONDIKE.

Soon the Gold Region Will Be in Direct Electrical Communication.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 13.—H. L. Gilchin, in charge of the supplies of the public works in the Yukon, in an interview, said that the telegraph system between Atlin and the outside world would be completed and in operation by Oct. 1, and that by the same time the line which the Dominion government is to extend from Dawson to Fort Cudahy, on the international boundary between Yukon territory and Alaska on the Yukon, would be ready for use. The latter was about fifty miles long. The system to be constructed in the Yukon basin will connect with the British system through the Yukon basin and serve the chief points of the far north. A wholesale reduction both ways on the Yukon between Dawson and White Horse and affecting intermediate as well as through travel, is pronounced by the White pass and Yukon route, effective immediately on all its steamers. Late Dawson papers report that elaborate preparations are being made for the reception of Lord and Lady Minto at Dawson.

POLICE LOOKING FOR A CLUE

Two North Jackson street homes received visits from burglars Saturday night between one o'clock and three o'clock in the morning. At one place they succeeded in entering and ransacking the house and at the other were seen before they succeeded in getting in and were frightened away.

The first place visited by the thieves was the residence of F. S. Baines which is occupied during his absence abroad by Mr. George Thomas of the Isabel company. Here the burglars gained an entrance to the house through a window on the side porch opening into the dining room which was not locked. From the number of burnt matches scattered around the house the burglars must have made a thorough examination of the premises. They were either amateurs or they were frightened away before they secured any booty. Mr. Thomas said large numbers of valuables were lying around where they could scarcely be overlooked.

The first that Mr. Thomas knew that there had been burglars in the house was about six o'clock Sunday morning, being an early riser he thought he would get up and take care of his horse and after dressing went down stairs. On entering the dining room the first thing that he saw was a suit of his clothes lying on the dining room table. He thought it was very odd that his clothes should be down there on the table, so went back up stairs and asked his wife if she had left his clothes on the dining room table. She thought he was fooling and said she had not touched any of his clothes. Mr. Thomas said that if she had not touched them they had been visited by burglars. They immediately commenced to investigate to find out what had been taken but could find nothing missing.

They found burnt matches scattered all over the house showing that the burglars had been everywhere. To get the suit of clothes that was carried down stairs the burglars had entered the sleeping room and had walked by the side of the bed where the space between the bed and the wall was not more than three and a half feet wide, opened the closet door and entered the closet and took the clothes and carried them down stairs.

Missed $3,000 Worth of Jewelry.
Fortunately for Mr. Thomas, they took a suit that hung further along in the closet than the suit he had been wearing, otherwise they would have secured about sixty dollars which was in his pants pocket. His gold watch and chain with a diamond charm attached lay on the dresser in plain sight as was also Mrs. Thomas' jewel case with about three thousand dollars worth of jewelry and diamonds in it.

How the burglars came to overlook all these valuables is more than Mr. Thomas can tell. He thinks either he or his wife must have moved in their sleep and the burglars thinking they were awake skipped out without getting anything but the clothes.

The burglars left the house by the side door, which they had opened in order to make a safe way of escape in case they were discovered. The door was found open when Mr. Thomas came down stairs in the morning, and he is congratulating himself on his good fortune that he is not a three or four thousand dollar loser by the visit.

After leaving the Thomas house, the burglars crossed the street to the home of E. G. Fife and went to one of the lower windows on the north side of the house. Here they pried open the blinds with a large chisel, and started to cut away the screen. Mrs. Fife, who sleeps on the lower floor, was alone in the house, with the exception of her daughters, Mrs. Frank Sherer and Miss Kate Fife, who were sleeping upstairs. Mr. Fife being away from home.

Aroused by the Noise
She was aroused by the noise made in opening the blinds and started to investigate. She saw the man engaged in cutting the screen and seeing he was discovered started and ran toward the back of the house.

Mrs. Fife, immediately aroused her daughters and they ran across the street to the home of their brother, Frank Fife, and aroused him. He immediately telephoned to Chief of Police Hogan, who said he was sick but he ordered a couple of officers to go up immediately. By the time the officers arrived the thieves had disappeared and there was nothing they could do. Mrs. Fife discovered the man at her window about three o'clock this morning so it must have been just before they were at the Thomas home.

The police after investigating the matter were unable to find any trace of the men with the exception of the large chisel used to pry open the blinds and cut the screen at Mrs. Fife's, which they left behind in their flight.

Still Another Attempt
Albert Sherwood, a miller in the employ of the Blodgett Milling company, and residing on Washington street, in the First ward, had an experience with the burglar that was making the rounds of the First ward, Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood attended the show at the opera house, and returned home about 11:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Sherwood has a couple of kittens, of which she is very fond, and after she and her husband had retired she heard a noise at her door, and thinking one of the kittens had been left outside, went to the door, opened it and stepped out on the porch. She called the kittens, and in looking around for it discovered an umbrella stuck up in the ground just outside the porch. She could not understand why an umbrella should be standing there and called to her husband.

Saw a Man's Leg.
Just as she called a man swung his legs over the edge of the roof of the porch, his feet being right in front of her face. At this she screamed and told her husband to come quick as a man was on the roof of the porch trying to get into the house. Mr. Sherwood rushed to the door but before he could get out on the porch the man jumped from the roof, grabbed his umbrella, ran across the lawn and across Washington street towards Mr. Woodruff's house on the opposite side of the street falling down twice in his flight, he turned down a side street towards the river and disappeared from view.

Mr. Sherwood did not pursue the man who he describes as being of short and heavy build, dressed in a dark suit of clothes with a soft back felt hat. The foot prints in the lawn where the man jumped from the roof of the porch to the ground are very short and wide. Sherwood and his wife had a good view of the man as there is an electric light only a short distance away and he was in the light for some time.

This must have been the same party that visited the Thomas and Fife residences, as he was at Sherwood's about half past twelve, and evidently came down towards town after he left here.

Five thousand dollars has been expended this year in improving the grounds which includes the best half mile track in the state.

Several fast Rock county horses have been entered in the speed contests, the cash prizes being most liberal.

New buildings and a large grand stand have been erected. With the running of a special train from Janesville it is expected that at least a thousand visitors from this city alone will be in attendance.

Cleanest in America.

The Lacksawanna Railroad is the cleanest railroad in America. Even though it cared little for the comfort of its passengers, which it does, it probably would burn hard coal, for the reason that it owns the most extensive anthracite coal mines in Pennsylvania, and it is cheaper for it to burn hard coal, which makes no smoke, than soft. At any rate, there is no smoke from its locomotives. It is built for the most part through the mountains where rock is the material easiest of access, and its road bed for that reason is rock ballasted. There is therefore, no dust. These two things are of unusual interest to the traveler by the line, for the reason that on no other road in the United States is there stronger incentive to keep one's eyes upon the passing scene. It is said of this line truthfully that every mile is picturesque. It traverses the agricultural region of Western New York, the valley region of Central New York, the mountain region of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and every mile offers a view that is beautiful, interesting and entrancing. In point of comfort its passengers are particularly fortunate, for, in addition to there being no smoke or dust, the cars are roomy and scrupulously clean. Sleeping cars, parlor cars and dining cars offer all the conveniences and comforts of modern travel.

DOG AND PONY SHOW IS IN TOWN TODAY

Gentry's Popular Traveling Outfit Gives a Delightful Performance This Afternoon—Another Tonight.

Gentry's dog and pony show, which arrived in the city on its own special train yesterday morning, is undoubtedly the best show of the kind on the road. The performance is clean; hence its long continued popularity. This is the third season that the Gentrys have been in Janesville and always draw large crowds. It is a great favorite with the children, but this year especially, it is of interest to the older people. The patience and skill that must necessarily have been employed in obtaining the marvelous results as shown by the performance of these trained animals, is something worth seeing. There are no fake sidebrows, no after the show concert or other money making schemes connected with the show, and that is another good feature. This afternoon the performance was witnessed by a large crowd. Every one was there, the old and the young, the tall and the short, the babies and the mothers, the swell and the well, the others, in fact everybody that could get inside the tent. The Gentry name is well known here and a hearty welcome is extended the show on every visit.

Each year sees the Gentry performance a little better than the year previous. This year's show is all that is claimed for it and delighted the audience. The performance opens with the presentation of the entire group of performers and a fine array they make, the horses, dogs, two baby elephants and the monkeys. The performance goes with a rush and there is something to see in the brilliant acts which these wonderful animals do, but there are some that stand out remarkably. Among these is the wonderful climbing of Steve Brodie, one of the dogs, to the top of the long ladder and jumping downward to be caught in a blanket. The walking of a tight rope by another of the dogs, bearing a monkey on his back, is another very astonishing act. They turn somersaults forward and backward, walk on fore and hind paws, three feet and two feet and innumerable tricks all more or less astonishing.

The ponies are finely trained top, and do many remarkable things. The two elephants are very clever. They are new additions to the show and are well come. Taken all through the Gentry show is a very pleasing one for old and young alike and deserves to do well. A feature which the little folk find quite as delightful as the show itself is the privilege which the management accords them of taking a ride on the backs of the little ponies after the performance. Several of the ponies are kept busy at this after both the performances. The show gave a performance at 2 o'clock this afternoon and will give another at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Holders of Trust Stock Bellow the Loudest Against Them.

The Hon. James K. Jones of Arkansas and the Democratic national committee is about to go through the motions of conducting a campaign against trusts. It is depressing to have to say that the Hon James K. Jones is in the all infolding tentacles of the octopus and not struggling the least bit to get away.

Mr. Jones is said to be a stockholder in the round bale cotton trust. It is admitted in the south that the round bale is cheaper and better than the square bale. Consequently the round bale trust makes the southern cotton planters anxious. According to the Houston correspondent of The Globe-Democrat, the round bale trust is now trying to get "practical control of the south's cotton crop." Officially, Chairman Jones is not against trusts. As a Democrat he froths at the mouth when they are mentioned. As a private citizen and man of business he buys a good trust stock when he has the price.

Probably most of the shrewd and energetic citizens who are members of the Democratic national committee or of the various state committees have a finger in the trust pie. Why should they not? They might as well be expected not to be partners or stockholders in corporations as not to be interested financially in trusts. These are intended to be money making concerns, and for all the conventional Democratic prattle about money, Democrats like to have it just as much as other folks do.

When you hear the Democrats bellowing against trusts, just wonder how much trust stock they hold.—New York Sun.

During the civil war, as well as in our late war with Spain, diarrhea was one of the most troublesome diseases that the army had to deal with. In many instances it became chronic and the old soldiers still suffer from it. Mr. David Taylor of Wind Ridge, Green Co., Pa., is one of these. He uses Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and says he never found anything that would give him such quick relief. It is for sale by Smith's Pharmacy, next to P. O. Kodak agents.

Fenton's Disillusion.

Fenton was not exactly a sentimentalist, else in two months he would have had time to forget. He was, indeed, rather a slow man, who took life more as a matter for calculation than as a series of startling and unsolvable problems. But in one matter his faculty of calculation had played him false—he had fallen in love, and the woman whom he loved had married another man.

Two months' consideration and introspection did not make the matter clearer to him. He was an idle man, and this constant dwelling on the affair began to tell upon his nerves. His instinct for placid enjoyment deserted him, and he moved among his old associates in a self abstraction that made them nudge each other. This annoyed him, and one day, sitting solitary in his room, he decided to go abroad and escape from it. He ran over in his mind all the places that were likely to suit his mood, and with a folly that he recognized, but did not trouble to suppress, decided upon St. Winoc, a quiet, gray little place on the coast of Brittany. It was there a couple of years before he had come to the conclusion that he was in love with Kitty Densmore. She, by some happy accident, had found her way from Trouville to St. Winoc, and had persuaded her father to make a lengthened stay there. Fenton delayed his going also, and together they spent some particularly pleasant and growingly confidential weeks. But it never got beyond that, and perhaps Kitty was a little piqued.

As he stepped out upon the square, of which the Hotel du Centre formed one side, the light was just beginning to fade. The church reared itself darkly against a glowing sky. As he skirted its northern wall a breath of salt wind blew across his face, and instantly the spirit of his last visit returned to him. The folly of this struck him so definitely that he laughed, and with the sound of his own voice there came an unpleasant sense of solitude. He quickened his pace and, mounting an abrupt and narrow pathway, emerged upon a great stretch of level ground, which, half a mile beyond, sheered down and joined the ragged line of coast. Here he paused, letting his gaze range from east to west along the changing distance of the horizon. The sound of breaking surf reached him like the noise of wind in pine trees. As he moved forward again he seemed utterly alone.

Quite suddenly, however, he was aware of a figure that grew out of the dusk like a darker, moving shadow, and almost at the same time the wind brought him the stir of footsteps. He stopped and listened intently. As I have said, Fenton was not a sentimentalist, but his truth of instinct told him instantly that it was Kitty's step. She also was alone. The circumstances were so singular that he accepted them without a mental protest. He had neither anticipated nor desired a meeting; but, since the fates so clearly willed it, he would not turn back. Each was conscious of the presence of the other, so that, when they met, any expression of surprise on either side would have helped to make the position false. Fenton was thankful for the darkness, not for his own sake, but for hers. He had not time to strike out any definite plan before he was adrift upon the inevitable tide of circumstance.

"I did not expect to find you here, Mrs. Corwen," he said.

"Nor I you. Have you been here long?"

"I suppose for about two hours. And you?"

"We came last night," she said. He had turned in her direction, and they were walking slowly, side by side, down the path up which he had come. He could not see her face clearly, but there was something in her voice that made him jump to the conclusion that she was not quite happy. A dangerous desire to protect her from some indefinite sorrow sprang up in Fenton's heart. Such resentment as he had felt against her was resolved in the first conjecture of her unhappiness.

"Where are you staying?" he asked.

"At the Hotel de l'Univers, by the Plage."

"And why in that great, new, hideous place?"

"Frank preferred it," she said.

"Oh!" said Fenton. "Then you are going in exactly the wrong direction. Hadn't we better turn back?"

"I'm in no hurry to get back," she said.

"Frank is resting. He knows I'm fond of lonely walks."

"Perhaps you would rather that I left you?"

"No," she said. "I'm glad I met you; I'm glad you are here. Why did you come?"

"I did not know that you were here."

"Of course not. How could you? I persuaded Frank to bring me to St. Winoc quite on an impulse."

"Indeed? It is strange that we both had that impulse."

"Why strange?" asked Mrs. Corwen, with that note of sudden recklessness in her voice which makes a woman dangerous.

"Why strange?" she repeated.

"We were both happy here once. Why should we not choose to come again?"

"I came," said Fenton, moved for a moment beyond himself, "to escape from falling memories. It seems, rather, that I have succeeded in reviving them."

"What do you mean?" she asked, her voice grown a sort again.

"I have no right to tell you now," he said. "It is certainly time that you returned. The evenings are chilly on this coast."

She turned beside him, and they climbed the steep path again. A light veil of mist, which was swayed curiously at intervals by gusts of wind, hung over the level. They quickened step and, after a silent walk of some ten minutes, reached the head of the sandy track leading down to the Hotel de l'Univers. There Fenton paused.

"Let me leave you here," he said.

"Will you come down and see Frank?"

Mrs. Corwen said this with an indifference that offended Fenton. He had known Corwen, and, at least, the man was honest. He could not understand the obvious apathy with which his wife regarded him. Fenton wished to keep his memory of her from the slight of what seemed very like ingratitude.

"I shall be glad to see Corwen again," he said. "I will call tomorrow."

"I may see you again before you meet."

I am always out quite early along the cliffs. My husband, as you may remember, sleeps well into the morning. He does not care for walking. Good night!"

Fenton held the unglazed hand she offered him for a moment. Standing thus close together and face to face, their eyes met openly for the first time. There was a challenge in hers that Fenton was sure she did not understand, but it moved him strangely nevertheless, and she was very beautiful.

"Good night," he said. "I shall see you tomorrow."

The sun had risen an hour, and the hill up which he set his face seemed like a black and solid shadow against the clear wash of gold in the east. At its summit was a great granite crucifix, facing northward, a sign to ships at sea and to men and women on land who toiled there through the changing seasons. As Fenton reached the spot a fresh wind blew across his face, charged with brine and autumn. He turned seaward and at the same moment saw the slim figure of Mrs. Corwen as she skirted the cliffs a quarter of a mile away. Her head was bent forward to meet the wind, so that he was unobserved. He repressed his first impulse, and instead of going to her he sat down to think. Again the process was entirely fruitless, and she was beside him before he realized the situation.

They greeted each other with a formality that struck Fenton as incongruous. He did not quite relish his position, yet the circumstances were agreeable enough.

"I expected to find you here," Mrs. Corwen said.

"Why?"

"It was always a favorite spot of yours."

"So you remember that?"

"Why should I forget?"

He looked at her closely. In that searching light he found no flaw in her beauty. Mrs. Corwen was alluring, as Kitty Densmore had been.

"I thought," he said, "you might have forgotten what had happened at that time."

"I forget nothing," she answered, "and least of all the time when I was happiest."

"And you are not happy now?" he asked. The question slipped from him before he saw to where it might lead; but, having asked it, he waited for a reply with an eagerness that surprised himself.

"I am not happy," she said, after a pause.

"I suppose," he said, "that you have found settling down in life a little prosaic. For myself I accepted the prose long ago."

"How long ago?"

"To be quite candid," he said, "it was not long ago, after all—say two months."

"And I," she said, "at the same time began to find the world narrower than I thought it was."

"I think," said Fenton, picking up a glove which she had let fall, "that we have both been very foolish."

He drew the glove slowly through the fingers of his left hand as he watched her, and then, realizing where they stood, he moved away. He was not, as I have said, a sentimentalist, but of a sudden he felt insignificant and ashamed. He saw the woman who followed him for what she was—very weak, very petulant, very beautiful, so tender as to appeal with infantile persuasion to his strength, but so light of will as to be of less danger to him than to herself. When he turned to her again, his voice was lower, but it had taken a more certain and decisive tone. He did not wonder that he had ever loved her, but he knew that such love as remained was never to be spoken.

"We have been very foolish," he said.

"Because we have not accepted the position which we ourselves made. Even up to this morning my foolishness was alive; now it is eyes and dead."

She moved away from him a little, with the simple instinct of a child. Then, as men will on such occasions, he fell into the terms of platitude: "Life is full of disappointment; one more or less between the beginning and the end can make small difference. If my advice is of any service, take it for what it is worth. Go back to your hotel, and, after breakfast, make my friend Corwen take you to Dinard. He will, you know, if you only ask him. I shall perhaps see you in town before Christmas."

She paused in her walk and looked at him, half smiling and a little afraid.

"Are you going away, then?" she asked.

"Yes," he said. "I shall go tomorrow morning by the first diligence. We shall probably not meet again here. Your road lies in that direction; mine in this. Good-by."

They shook hands in the casual way of chance acquaintances and parted. When Fenton reached the Hotel du Centre, he shut himself in his room and spent a day of peculiar and irritating inactivity. He did not suffer from any acute disquiet, but his life had temporarily ceased to interest him. He saw that he had been very near a precipice, but the feeling of safety did not fill up the gap which his disillusion left. He told himself again, as he had done four days before, that he was a fool. Perhaps the sincerity of this belief helped to hold him to his resolve.

The following morning, as his luggage was being carried out, he stood at the corner of the square from which the hill crowned with the crucifix was visible. It was deserted and bare, half shrouded in a thin veil of mist. The driver, in the hard, metallic voice of his kind, cried, "A voiture!" and Fenton took his place without another look behind.—Exchange.

A Sore Expression.

"No. 'Sweet girl graduate' is a sore expression for me."

"Why should it be?"

"The sweetest one of them I ever saw was my lady's daughter. She used to collect the board bills. Temper! The late Mrs. Xantippe was an angel compared to her. And sarcasm! That girl's tongue would make a man want to hustle off somewhere and pawn his only suit of clothes. She never had any sympathy for a man. She had taken the very socks his mother knit him for board. And yet you never saw a sweeter high school graduate than she was. And what do you suppose the subject of her essay was?"

"Well, what?"

Joker Knocked Insensible.

Binghamton, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Girl bathers in a cove near here turned the tables on Delany Marvin and W. K. Hunt, young men giving Joliet, Ill., as their home, who played a practical joke on the young women by placing a turtle in the cove. The bathers thought their daily trips to the cove were unsuspected, but the Joliet men had discovered it. After placing the turtle in the water the men hid in the shrubbery. One of the girls entered the water and the turtle seized her by the toe. In the panic which followed the presence of the young men was discovered. Gathering a quantity of stones they attacked the jokers with such effect that Marvin was knocked unconscious into the water. He was pulled out by his companion and resuscitated after considerable difficulty.

Poisoned Fruit Kills Boys.

Cleburne, Tex., Aug. 14.—At Bluffdale, an isolated place west of this city, the people are greatly worked up over the wholesale poisoning of a number of boys. The boys went into a farmer's watermelon patch and ate and destroyed many melons. A few days later the boys wrote the farmer a note, telling him they were going to visit his patch again and would get even more melons than on the previous visit. The farmer split the stems of some of the melons and inserted strychnine. Six boys visited the patch and ate of the melons. Two boys died in the patch, two died on the way home and two died after reaching their homes.

I have used them all, but GRAIN-O I have found superior to any for the reason that it is solid grain.

No Quarter Shown Ashantis.

Bakwal, Aug. 13.—A column of 700 men under Col. Burroughs has returned from Kumassi, having re-enforced and retrained the fort for two months. The force attacked and destroyed three old stockades after a desperate bayonet charge, in which four officers and thirty-four native soldiers were wounded and three killed. On the night of Aug. 7 Col. Burroughs attacked an Ashanti war camp near Kumassi, surprising the camp and bayoneting the enemy. Great numbers were slain without a gun being fired. A lieutenant was killed and two men were wounded.

Other flying columns are going out, and it is believed that the punishment inflicted will not soon be forgotten, though several defeats are still needed to clear the country south of Kumassi of the rebels.

MR. TREAT'S WORK.

The Madison State Journal says

Chairman J. B. Treat the following comment:

The retirement of Hon. Joseph B. Treat from the position of chairman of the republican state central committee demands more than a passing notice.

Mr. Treat has filled this responsible position during the past term with signal fidelity to the great interests which have been entrusted to him. He has never lowered the standard of republicanism. He has been true to every principle of his party and to every candidate for office upon the republican ticket. He has worked indefatigably in the discharge of his duties and has managed campaigns with marked ability and with decided success. The chairmanship of the central committee is a thankless position—no compensation attending it, and the privilege of free transportation on the railroads having been cut off by law on that subject. The position is also, under many circumstances, a very annoying one. Oftentimes the chairman is without funds, unless he draws the same from his own pocket, which without doubt, Mr. Treat has often done. The cry comes up to the chairman for speakers, and there being none to supply the demand, the situation becomes very annoying. The campaign when once on, extends through the state, and the chairman is compelled, therefore, to keep his eye on every locality, watching out for every possible interest of the party, seeing to it that nothing goes by default. It is probably that no previous chairman ever brought to the discharge of the responsible duties of the position a stronger disposition to do the right thing under all circumstances than has Mr. Treat. He has never used his position for the purpose of seating favorites in official office, a practice which frequently has been overdone in the past most outrageously. Mr. Treat has been no ordinary chairman, as he is no ordinary man. Being possessed of an independent fortune, he was not necessitated to make himself a wheel horse of the party, but being called to this position by the best republicans in the state, he could not conscientiously decline to accept it; therefore, he entered upon the discharge of its duties. He has frequently been mentioned in connection with the nomination for governor, and if he had entered the race early in the last campaign, he would have been a formidable candidate. He retires from the position, which he has filled so ably and so well, with the thanks and gratitude of the republicans of the state.

He should realize that there is no republican in the state who stands higher in the esteem and confidence of the party, and, in fact, of the whole people, than he does. Mr. Treat is yet a comparatively young man, and, if at any time he should desire to enter the political arena, he would be a strong candidate for any position within the gift of the people.

A. M. Stevenson, who in 1896, as a delegate-at-large from Colorado with Senator Teller and others walked out of the republican national convention and who afterward assisted in organizing the Silver Republican party, resigned the chairmanship of the party in this state and announced his return to the republican party. He's had enough of Bryan and his vagaries.

Many democratic papers that recognized Mr. La Follette's ability as a citizen and a candidate are now busily engaged in crawling and calling him names. 'Twas ever thus. The difference between a candidate and a nominee, according to these prints, is something wonderful.

According to a floating paragraph, a Cleveland judge has decided that "any woman is justified in scolding her husband if he comes home drunk and ill-treats her and the children." Make it "scolding" instead of "scolding." Your Honor, and we'll all say "Amen!"

General John M. Palmer, the gold democratic presidential candidate in 1896, says the issue of imperialism will win no votes for Mr. Bryan. General Palmer is right. The American people know their own minds, and the wool cannot be pulled over their eyes.

A Portage newspaper suggests the name of J. L. Mahoney, of this city, as an available candidate for the democratic nomination for attorney general, and it goes without saying that Janesville people would be pleased to have a Bower city man so honored.

Three democratic gubernatorial possibilities have declined to be so considered and the disposition to dodge the republican juggernaut appears to be quite contagious. Why don't the democrats also withdraw and make it unanimous?

The caucuses on Tuesday, Aug. 21, will be the last ones held by the republicans. The man who attends caucuses has been kept pretty tolerably busy this summer.

Perjury and pocket pistols still go hand in hand in Kentucky.

WISCONSIN TO LEAD
THE G. A. R. PARADE

5,000 BADGER STATE VETERANS
WILL GO TO CHICAGO.

Reunion of the Eighth and Fourth Volunteers and the Iron Brigade and Other Civil War Associations Will Be Wisconsin Events During the National Encampment.

The Wisconsin department has been selected to lead the parade in the Chicago national encampment, Tuesday, Aug. 28, and it is expected that 5,000 Badger state veterans will be in line. They will leave various points in the state in time to reach Chicago early Tuesday morning.

The rendezvous will be at Randolph street and Michigan boulevard. Aide-de-camp on the staff of the commander-in-chief will report for duty not later than 8 p. m. Monday, Aug. 27, to Senior Aide-de-camp J. Cary Winans, at headquarters, Palmer house.

Parade to Form on Lake Front.

The parade will move at 10 a. m., forming on the lake front. The head of the column will form at Randolph street and Michigan boulevard. The line of march is from Randolph to State, to Adams, to Franklin, to Monroe, to Market, to Jackson boulevard, and then south to the reviewing stand and through the court of honor where the veterans will disband.

The entire route is two miles in length. The "Pageantry of Patriotism" which will be a prominent and distinctive feature of the parade, will be under the supervision of Daniel E. Sickles, past department commander of the department of New York.

Illinois Man for Commander

John C. Black of Chicago, was mentioned as a possible candidate for commander-in-chief, but there is no possibility of his election, as Illinois has been honored with the location of the encampment, and during the last few years has had two commanders-in-chief. It is generally thought that, as so few will have an opportunity to be thus honored, other states ought to have a chance. Major Leo Rasseus comes with his home endorsement, and has been such a prominent member of the order, with superior ability, that it is quite likely there will be no other candidate for commander-in-chief.

Badger State Reunions

A large attendance is expected at the reunion of the Eighth and Fourth Wisconsin Volunteer infantry, during the national encampment. George B. Van Norman of Chicago, is making the arrangements. Announcement of the time and place of the reunion will be made later.

A campfire and reunion of Wisconsin soldiers at Chicago, under charge of Department Commander James is being arranged.

MOURN THE DEATH OF THEIR COMRADES

RAILROAD MEN GATHERED AT FUNERAL YESTERDAY.

Last Sad Rites Over the Remains of E. P. Schlatter and Gus Abendroth Killed in the Collision of Last Friday—Floral Offerings Were Very Large.

The last sad rites over all that was mortal of the late E. P. Schlatter, who was killed in the railroad wreck Friday afternoon, were held from his home, 112 Madison street, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and from St. Mary's church at 2:30 o'clock.

A large number of friends and railroad employes with whom the deceased was exceedingly popular, gathered at the house and at the church to pay their last respects to the deceased and show their sympathy for the bereaved widow and children. The Rev. W. A. Goebel officiated, and rendered a very effective funeral service.

Casket Covered with Flowers.

The casket was covered with flowers, an immense quantity of cut flowers and beautiful pieces being sent by sorrowing friends and the railroad orders of which the deceased was a member. One of the most beautiful pieces represented a broken wheel, and was sent by the employees of the C. M. & St. P. R. R.

The funeral procession was headed by a large number of station agents of the C. M. & St. P. R. R. and the Chicago & Northwestern, followed by the Order of Railway Engineers.

The Pall Bearers.

The pall bearers were members of the Order of Railway Engineers and intimate friends of the deceased, they were: Thomas Fox, Cornelius Harrison, Patrick Whalen, Wm. Dee, Thomas James and Chas. Warren.

A large number of relatives and friends from out of the city were in attendance. They were Mrs. Schlatter mother, at Frank, Theresa, Agnes and Clara, brother and sisters of the deceased, from Plattville, Wis., and John Schlatter, a brother from Chillicothe, Ohio.

The relatives of Mrs. Schlatter present were, Mrs. Thomas Ingles, Mrs. Edward Ingles and Mr. and Mrs. N. Graber of Mineral Point and Mrs. John Phillips and John Blatz, of Dodgeville.

The cousins of the deceased present were Frank, John, August and Bert Micka and August Roselip, all of Plattville.

Brotherhood of Engineers.

Members of the Brotherhood of Engineers present from away were Peter Lend, John Lewis, M. S. Twitchell, Al Orvis, J. F. Mills and M. Sersey, of Madison, and Wm. Lees, M. Mockedon and H. Baumgartner of Milwaukee.

The out of town friends of the family present were Mrs. Henry Feiden, Mrs. John Jenck, Mrs. Wm. H. Leahy, Chas. McIlhenn, N. H. Snow, Patrick Whalen, Henry Schiller, Mrs. S. J. Vedder, Waukesha; J. Welch, Watertown; Train Despatchers W. B. Hendricks and J. M. Fox of Milwaukee were also present.

The interment was at Mount Olivet cemetery.

FUNERAL OF GUSTAVE ABENDROTH

Floral Pieces Were Numerous and Exceedingly Handsome

The funeral of Gustave Abendroth who was killed in the C. M. & St. P. R. R. wreck, Friday afternoon, was held from his home yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock and from St. John's church at 10 o'clock. The church was much too small to hold the large number of relatives and friends of this popular young man, who had gathered to pay their last respects. The Reverend P. J. Werth delivered a touching funeral sermon which brought tears to the eyes of his many friends. The St. John's choir rendered several beautiful selections.

A large number of relations and friends accompanied the remains to the grave.

The floral tributes were numerous and exceedingly handsome. Several beautiful pieces, representing the "Gates Ajar," sickles and a beautiful floral ark, were sent by the different railroad orders. The casket was covered with flowers, and resembled a beautiful floral bank, rather than the last resting place of a young man.

The pall bearers were George Kueck, William Heing, Julius Bergman, August Bergman, Albert Bergman, and Louis Bartling.

There was a large attendance of railroad employes both from this city and other cities on the line of the railroads running out of here, the young man being a general favorite with all he came in contact with.

The interment was at Oak Hill cemetery.

The following from outside the city attended the Abendroth funeral:

Mrs. Anna White, and Miss Edna White, Sterling, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. John F. Brandt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Abendroth, and the Misses Grace Anna, Lydia, Mary Abendroth, and Lewis, Datus and Edward Abendroth, all of Monroe, and Miss Mamie Carey of Shullsburg, Wis.

The members of the families of Mr. E. P. Schlatter and Mr. Gus Abendroth wish to express their thanks to the many people who so kindly assisted them in their time of trouble, especially to the Janesville Fire Police, who so kindly assisted in removing the bodies from the wreck of the engine and tenderly caring for them.

Matilda Broitman.

For the second time in a few days death's heavy hand has been laid upon the family of Mr. and Mrs. Broitman of 142 Eastern avenue. Only a short time ago their young son was laid to rest in Oak Hill and last night at 6:30 o'clock little Matilda, the eight months old daughter passed away. The stricken parents have the sympathy of the community. The funeral services were held from the house this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. John Koerner officiated. The interment was at Oak Hill cemetery.

J. H. Snyder

J. H. Snyder, formerly of Clinton, Wis., where he ran a hotel for years and afterwards proprietor of the Park Hotel, which he ran for several years, died this afternoon at his hotel and boarding house at No. 6 South Franklin street. The funeral arrangements will be given later.

Cornelius Cronin

Cornelius Cronin, an old resident of this city, died Saturday night at the Rock County asylum. He is well along in years and had been in feeble health for some time. The funeral will be held from St. Patrick's church on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Ferguson

Mrs. Ferguson, an aged inmate of the Rock County insane asylum from the northern part of the state, died last night. The interment will be at the asylum burying ground.

Mr. Thoroughgood Wants to Know Editor Gazette: For some time past it has been the custom for Mrs. Thoroughgood to keep a sprinkling can on our cemetery lot in Oak Hill. If the person who took it will return it the subscriber will willingly buy them a new one and ask no questions. We feel more interested in knowing what kind of an animal ran away with a cheap sprinkler, rather than giving them trouble.

LIGHTNING STRIKES FLOCK OF SHEEP

Eighteen Out of 120 Killed During the Storm Saturday Night on the T. B. Bailey Farm.

On Saturday night at the farm of T. B. Bailey near Turtleville, lightning struck a flock of 120 sheep belonging to Ernest Reimer, the tenant on the farm, and killed 18.

Mr. Reimer saw the sheep lying there Sunday morning but thought nothing of it and again at noon saw them in the same place so thought he would investigate.

When he arrived where the sheep were lying he found that they had been struck by lightning and killed.

The curious fact was that the sheep were all lying with their heads toward the center their bodies radiating toward the outside like the spokes of a wheel. It is supposed that the lightning struck the bunch and their heads being close together

Used a Divining Rod.
Poughkeepsie, Aug. 13.—The report of a stolen rowboat brought to the attention of the police the vagaries of Alonzo Foster, 35 years of age, who lives in this city. For the past ten years Foster has been hunting for gold in the mountains of this section, using a divining rod which somebody gave him long ago, and which he believes possesses a magical power that will make it sink into the earth where there is gold. The old man got his rowboat ready for a trip to the Highlands, 25 miles down the river, where he thought he would find great treasure in a place known as Capt. Kidd's cave. He loaded his boat with tools and put in the divining rod. The next morning when he got ready to start he found that the boat and all its contents had been stolen. Foster has been almost heartbroken, and has appealed to the police to find his property, especially the divining rod.

Baby Held to $100,000,000.
Ashville, N. C., Aug. 14.—The news is abroad that the stork had paid his visit to Baltimore last Sunday and presented Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt with an heir. People are lost in speculation and wonderment as to why so much secrecy was maintained concerning an event which is so interesting to the whole country. The newcomer is a boy baby and is heir to $100,000,000. The father married Miss Edith Stuyvesant Dresser on June 1, 1898, in Paris. The bride was an heiress.

Underneath Man Fined $10.
St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 14.—The undershirt man made his initial appearance in the police court. When questioned by the judge why he had no coat or shirt he said he was the original undershirt man and did not propose to be made uncomfortable by fashion. He was fined $10 for disturbing the peace.

New King Takes the Oath.
Rome, Aug. 13.—King Victor Emmanuel III. took the formal constitutional oath before parliament. The senate chamber was draped with mourning, the benches and tribunes being covered with black furnishings; bordered with silver. The chamber was filled with senators and deputies, high officials of state and the diplomatic corps. The booming of cannon announced the departure of the royal party from the quirinal. The king said in part: "Reared in love of religion and of country, I take God as witness of my promise that from today I will work always with all my heart for the greatness and prosperity of my country." The king spoke in a strong voice and his words greatly touched everyone present, many persons being in tears. When the sovereigns reentered the quirinal the crowd outside so loudly cheered them that they were twice forced to appear on the balcony.

ECZEMA'S ITCH IS TORTURE.
Eczema is caused by an acid humor in the blood coming in contact with the skin and producing great redness and inflammation; little pustular eruptions form and discharge a thin, sticky fluid, which dries and scales off; sometimes the skin is hard, dry and fissured. Eczema in any form is a tormenting, stubborn disease, and the itching and burning at times are almost unbearable; the acid burning humor seems to ooze out and set the skin on fire. Salves, washes nor other external applications do any real good, for as long as the poison remains in the blood it will keep the skin irritated.

BAD FORM OF TETTER.
"For three years I had Tetter on my hands, which caused them to swell to twice their natural size. Part of the time the disease was in the form of running sores, very painful, and causing me much discomfort. Four doctors said the Tetter had progressed too far to be cured, and they could do nothing for me. I took only three bottles of S. S. S. and was completely cured. This was fifteen years ago, and I have never seen any sign of my old trouble."—Mrs. L. B. JACKSON, 1414 McGee St., Kansas City, Mo.

S. S. S. neutralizes this acid poison, cools the blood and restores it to a healthy, natural state, and the rough, unhealthy skin becomes soft, smooth and clear.

SSS cures Tetter, Erysipelas, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum and all skin diseases due to poisoned condition of the blood. Send for our book and write us about your case. Our physicians have made these diseases a life study, and can help you by their advice; we make no charge for this service. All correspondence is conducted in strictest confidence.

CHINESE WOMEN.

BY CALLA ROBELY HAINES.

How They Live,
What They Wear and How They Are Regarded by Chinese Men.

The Chinese woman is kept well in the background. In the lower classes she undoubtedly leads a life of degrading bondage, and even the women of the upper classes have only a limited amount of freedom. Of course there are notable exceptions. There is the empress dowager herself, who, according to the popular tradition, rose from a slave girl to hold sway over the whole empire.

But there are several other powerful and ambitious women in China. One of these is the wife of Kenc Shu Tsay.

WIFE OF A MANDARIN.

a prominent Boxer chief. She has a most intense and jealous hatred of the dowager empress and it is believed, would like to make herself the next "old woman of China." She is her husband's chief adviser, and it is she who has urged on the Boxer outrages from the beginning.

But, while there are rare instances where Chinese women have won power and prominence, it is the general sentiment in China that women are of inferior clay and are to be treated more as vassals than as equals. In spite of all this the feminine ideal is high in China, but it is one of the characteristics of this inscrutable race that their theories are often at variance with their practices.

From her very birth the Chinese woman has an unenviable lot. At her first appearance in the world she meets a disappointed and angry father. As a girl she is given the most rudimentary education. At 12 she is banished from all companionship to become "the young girl who sits in the house" until her marriage, when she is apt to marry some one she has never seen. Then she must obey her husband and her mother-in-law.

The doctrine inculcated in the Chinese classics is that a woman has three stages of obedience—first, to her father; second, to her husband, and, third, if her husband dies, to her son when he reaches manhood. The proverb reads: "Men wish their boys to be like wolves and fear lest they should be timid. Their girls they wish to be like mice and fear lest they should have the boldness of the tiger." The laws established 2,300 years ago are in force today, and among them are no rules stricter than those for keeping the women in bondage.

Chinese books of instruction for girls consist chiefly of exhortations to discharge their duties as daughters, wives, mothers and daughters-in-law. "The Girl's Fair Books," to which two famous emperors wrote prefaces, describe how the female mind and character must be trained. Modesty, gentleness, self sacrifice, wisdom, respect for elders and a virtuous disposition must be a woman's equipment in life. There is no pressing need for intellectual education.

About 100 women in every 10,000, however, read books of philosophy, literature, poems. Among the aristocratic classes men of letters have even been known to teach their wives and daughters not only to read, but to write, and they have as well published literary works by them. The standard book of etiquette in China was written by Lady Cho 2,700 years since. She was the widow of a distinguished literary man of north China and after his death was faithful to his memory. Her husband's brother was historian of that dynasty, but when his work was half completed he lost his sight. The emperor sent a message to him asking who could finish the book, and the reply was returned that only his brother's widow was capable of doing it. The emperor sent for Lady Cho, and she was conducted in the greatest state to the palace. There she completed her brother's-in-law work so satisfactorily that it is impossible to tell where she took up her task.

It was not until less than two years ago that the gates of the Forbidden City were opened to let in women from the foreign legation. Of this occasion, when the exclusiveness of centuries was broken down for the time being and the first foreign women were permitted to see the glories of the dragon throne, Mrs. Conger, wife of our Chinese minister, sent home to some of her personal friends most interesting accounts. These letters have recently been made public on account of the widespread interest in the writer and in her subject.

The ladies entered the Imperial City with Lady Macdonald, wife of the British minister, as doyenne. Prince Ching, who is now reported to be befriending the foreigners, acted as master of ceremonies. The party having entered the palace, Mrs. Conger describes what followed thus:

"Our heavy garments were taken, and we were ushered into the presence of the emperor and empress dowager. Our first interpreter presented each lady to Prince Ching and, in turn, presented us to the empress dowager. Then Lady Macdonald read a little speech in behalf of the ladies. The empress dowager responded through Prince Ching; another bow on our part; then each lady was escorted to the throne, where she bowed and courted to the emperor, who reached out his hand to each; then a bow and courtesy to the empress dowager.

"She reached out both hands, and we stepped forward to her. She took both of ours, then placed upon the finger of each lady a beautiful heavy chased gold Chinese ring, set with a very large, fine pearl. After thanking her we backed from the throne and took our places below, as before.

"From here we were escorted by many richly dressed, highly painted, decorated young Chinese women and Chinese officials to the banquet hall, where a large table was filled to overflowing with Chinese and European food. Prince Ching, Princess Ching and five other princesses sat at the table with us. The empress dowager and Princess Ching were dressed in most exquisite embroidered rich satins and silks with large pearl decorations.

"They were not painted, and their hair was not extended to the extreme. The young princesses were beautifully and carefully dressed in rich, fine embroidered satins in bright colors. They had painted faces, their hair was extended and elaborately ornamented, and they had long gold finger protectors. They were pictures. The empress and all of her court have large feet.

"After this meal we were invited into other rooms and offered cigarettes and tea. The table was cleared away and we were invited into the hall again. There sat the empress dowager, and we gathered about her as before. She seemed bright and happy. Her face was aglow with good will. There was no trace of cruelty to be seen. In simple expressions she welcomed us, but her actions were full of freedom and warmth. She arose and wished us well. She reached both hands toward each lady and then to herself and said with much enthusiastic earnestness: 'One family. All one family.' Every-

WIFE OF KENC SHU TSAY, A BOXER LEADER. thing she said was in Chinese. She presented to each lady the empress, the emperor's wife, who gave her hand to each. The empress is young and what is called a beautiful Chinese woman. She wore the decorations, paint, etc., of the young women."

Of course these princesses looked very beautiful to Mrs. Conger, but that is the way all princesses are supposed to look. It is a matter of fact, however, that all Chinese women, unless they have reached the age of crooked backs and wrinkles, try to make themselves as attractive as possible. They show much art about it too.

Chinese women do not, however, wear hats and bonnets, but sometimes a band or crown. They wear jewelry, and they always make their own small shoes. Women wear shorter clothes than men, with skirts coming not quite to the knees. On special occasions the skirts may come to the feet.
